

Hoi An

Photo: Tang Trung Kien/Shutterstock.com

Hotaik Sung/Shutterstock.com

Bubble_Tea Stock/Shutterstock.com

saravutpics/Shutterstock.com

Hoi An's momentum as a sought-after destination shows no signs of slowing down: visitor numbers nearly tripled in 2018, followed by the title of 'world's best city' being awarded to it by esteemed travel publications in 2019. Hoi An's UNESCO-listed Ancient Town is photogenic to a fault, with its collection of distinctive mustard-coloured colonial homes, intriguing food and quaint streets that remain traffic-free for much of the day drawing in cruise excursionists and backpackers alike.

NOTE: This Guide has been limited to 20 points of interest per section. For the full guide, please visit ArrivalGuides.com

QUIZ

*What Type of Traveller
Are You Based on Your Travel IQ?*

TAKE THE QUIZ

Top 5

Hoi An Ancient Town
The part of Hoi An most sought-after by visitors is its incredibly photogeni...

Golden Bridge
The Cau Vang is a footbridge extending through Ba Na Hills that allows you t...

Japanese Covered Bridge
One of the Hoi An Ancient Town's most emblematic structures, the Japanese Co...

Rice Filed Tour
Cycling through the rice paddies in the surroundings of Hoi An is a popular ...

Chinese Assembly Halls
The Chinese who settled in Hoi An identified themselves according to their p...

THE TOWN

Tang Trung Kien/Shutterstock.com

The former trading port of Hoi An has risen to prominence as one of Vietnam's foremost travel destinations over the last few years, lagging only slightly behind the iconic Ha Long Bay - for now, that is. The compact city of just over 100,000 inhabitants continues to transform rapidly, with service businesses scurrying to meet the ever-increasing demand for Hoi An's atmospheric, UNESCO-listed Ancient Town, all this despite the introduction of a tourist entry fee a few years back.

This rising popularity has miraculously not been too detrimental to the unspoiled old-time atmosphere so many visitors are after: Hoi An remains traffic-free for most of the day, and much of the heritage left by Chinese and Japanese communities once inhabiting the city is well looked after and kept in excellent condition (the Japanese Covered Bridge built to connect the two enclaves remains one of the most popular sights, although the number of visitors is limited to 20 at a time).

DO & SEE

Bucha Natallia/Shutterstock.com

Apart from old merchant homes and assembly halls of various Chinese congregations that are some of the Ancient Town's highlights, Hoi An enjoys a fortunate location within a short distance from the beach, and even has a small island archipelago to its name: the laid-back Cham Islands are only a short ferry ride away, and are a great place for a relaxed getaway from the tourist masses. Cycling tours of the surrounding rice fields and Vietnamese cooking classes are some of the most popular activities in Hoi An, and the former French colonial port of Da Nang is an easy day trip from here (so are the Ba Na Hills with their stunning Golden Bridge held up by two enormous sculpted hands).

Hoi An Ancient Town

The part of Hoi An most sought-after by visitors is its incredibly photogenic mustard-coloured old town, a UNESCO-listed collection of beautifully preserved buildings; some of these still function as private homes, while a total of 22 are open to the public and operate largely as museums.

Of particular interest are historic merchant residences, some of which offer short guided tours (the Old House of Tan Ky is among the most interesting), and Chinese assembly halls used for gatherings and celebrations by individual ethnic groups.

Visiting each attraction will require one of the 5 admission slips that come with a general Hoi An Ancient Town entry ticket.

Photo: Sean Hsu/Shutterstock.com

Golden Bridge

The Cau Vang is a footbridge extending through Ba Na Hills that allows you to enjoy the surrounding natural landscape. The way it is structured may make you think that it is supported by the two massive stone hands, but they're actually decorative fiberglass structures that remain nonetheless a spectacle of their own.

Photo: Chompoo0991/Shutterstock.com

Address: Ba Na Hills, Da Nang, Vietnam

Japanese Covered Bridge

One of the Hoi An Ancient Town's most emblematic structures, the Japanese Covered Bridge dates back to the early 17th century, when it was first constructed by the Japanese community as a link to the Chinese quarters of Hoi An. Much of the original ornamental wood carvings remain preserved, and so do the sculptures of two dogs and two monkeys on either end of the bridge. Although the exact reasons for this particular animal selection isn't clearly identifiable, some explanations include the sacred status of the two in Japanese culture and birth years of Japanese emperors predominantly falling on either that of dog or monkey. Inside the bridge there is a tiny temple of the northern god Tran Vo Bac De, who is believed to hold powers of controlling weather.

The Japanese Covered Bridge is included on the list of attractions one can visit on an Ancient Town Entry Ticket.

Photo: Richie Chan/Shutterstock.com

Address: Nguyễn Thị Minh Khai, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Rice Filed Tour

Cycling through the rice paddies in the surroundings of Hoi An is a popular day trip from town. Organised tours may include visits to rice farms and guides that walk you through the entire process of rice cultivation; tours are organised by multiple local providers and can be arranged privately or as part of a group.

If you choose to go it alone, follow Cua Dai in the direction of Cua Dai Beach, and you will eventually end up in the rice fields traversed by bike paths. You're likely to encounter rice farmers and water buffalo that plough rice paddies along the way. Continue along Hai Ba Trung Street to reach the An Bang Beach.

Photo: HeadSpinPhoto/Shutterstock.com

Chinese Assembly Halls

The Chinese who settled in Hoi An identified themselves according to their province of origin. Each community built its own assembly hall, known as 'hoi quan' in Vietnamese, for social gatherings, meetings and celebrations.

The Fujian Assembly Hall is, perhaps, the best-known one; the Cantonese Assembly Hall stands out for its beauty and contains a tranquil inner courtyard, while the 19th century Hainan Assembly Hall functions, in part, as a memorial to the 108 merchants from Hainan who met a tragic fate being mistaken for pirates - the entire story is narrated via wall posters.

Photo: saiko3p/Shutterstock.com

Cycling in Hoi An

Although Hoi An is perfectly walkable, cycling an easy way of getting around if your itinerary extends beyond the old town (including An Bang Beach).

The Hoi An Old Town is closed off to all motorised traffic (including motorbikes) on most days, between 8.30 and 11.00 and then again 15.00 to 21.30, which means streets can be comfortably navigated by cyclists and pedestrians. Many hotels and guest houses offer bike rental services (or even complimentary bicycle use in some cases), but multiple bike rental shops operate throughout town as well. Prices are normally very reasonable and can be as low as 1 USD per day (depending on the bike).

Single-gear bikes will suffice for cycling through town, but mountain bikes are recommended for those who wish to venture into the country side. While locals will often be seen riding without helmets on, we recommend asking for one at your bike hire provider to ensure safety.

Photo: Tee11/Shutterstock.com

Beaches Close to Hoi An

If time allows to squeeze in a trip to the seaside, An Bang Beach is the best stretch of sand within easy reach from Hoi An. The beach is well-equipped with sunbeds and umbrellas, and is reachable by bicycle. There are multiple cafes and restaurants peppered along the coast, as well as a few locales that offer water sports equipment rental.

Another option is Cua Dai Beach, which is less busy and less convenient to swim at due to significant soil erosion, but the rapid development of nearby An Bang has helped Cua Dai become increasingly re-discovered by those looking for more privacy.

Photo: Long Nguyen Hong/Shutterstock.com

Address: Hai Bà Trưng, Tp. Hội An

Phan Boi Chau Street (Rue des Arts)

Formerly the main street of Hoi An's French Quarter, Phan Boi Chau is currently going through a renaissance: art galleries, exhibition spaces and sophisticated craft boutiques have opened here, bringing the street to the forefront of the town's cultural life.

If you only have time for one gallery visit, make it the Precious Heritage Art Gallery Museum. Brainchild of the acclaimed travel photographer Réhahn, the space contains an exhibition of his finest work - photographs taken across Vietnam that seemingly lay bare the souls of their subjects – as well as an impressive collection of authentic garments worn by various ethnic groups across the country.

There is a printed guide to the area's venues that can be picked up free of charge at many locations across town.

Photo: Reggie Lee/Shutterstock.com

Address: 26 Đường Phan Bội Châu, Cẩm Châu, Hội An

Opening hours: Daily 8.00-20.00

Phone: +84 235 6558 382

Tickets: Entry is free of charge

Internet:

www.rehahnphotographer.com/precious-heritage-museum

Hoi An Central Market

The bustling Hoi An market takes a little getting used to: it's distinctly more hectic than the downtown area, and teems with local vendors and shoppers as much as it does with tourists. Abundant Asian herbs, souvenirs like lacquered coconut shell bowls, Vietnamese coffee-makers and traditional cone hats are some of the wares on sale. Of particular interest are the indoor food stands serving up scrumptious snacks at some of the lowest prices in town.

Photo: Curioso/Shutterstock.com

Address: 73 Phan Bội Châu Sơn Phong tp. Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3861 323

Old House of Tan Ky

Seven generations saw to the Tan Ky house remaining in the excellent condition it welcomes visitors in today, as it continues to stand as an excellent example of the confluence of cultural influences that define Hoi An. This 18th century merchant home combines elements of Chinese and Japanese design, and even features elements of European influence (such as the grape leaves carved into the courtyard balcony). The house comes furnished with original period pieces and contains a small gift shop; there is an open courtyard at its centre which brings in light and air, creating an organic link to nature and preventing the structure from flooding (although this isn't a remedy in extremely high water).

Photo: Robert Lafond/Flickr (image cropped)

Address: 101 Nguyễn Thái Học, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Opening hours: Daily 8.30-17.45

Phone: +84 235 3861 474

Hoi An Night Market

From 6 to 9 pm daily, Hoi An's Nguyen Hoang Street transforms into a 300-metre long bustling night market, unfolding underneath a myriad colourful lanterns. It's a great place to stock up on souvenirs: prices are low and can get even lower for those with haggling skills.

Photo: LeQuangNhut/Shutterstock.com

Address: Nguyen Hoang, Hoi An

RESTAURANTS

Tang Trung Kien/Shutterstock.com

Vietnam is known for staggering variation in cuisine, each region and major settlement boasting its own unique specialities that are hard to come by elsewhere in the country. Hoi An is especially known for its varied, scrumptious street food, which is beautifully showcased along roadsides during Night Market hours (every day from 6 to 10pm). Some of the eats not to be missed are 'bahn mi' (baguette sandwiches with various ingredients), 'cao lau' pork noodles (say "cow low"), the local variety of chicken rice 'com ga', white rose dumplings 'bánh bao bánh vac', and the obligatory hit 'bahn xeo': a crispy pancake packed with a selection of proteins and vegetables, to be dipped into fermented peanut sauce.

STREETS

Although the excellent 'cao lau' and white rose dumplings are reason enough to stop by, what truly makes STREETS stand out is their mission.

Humanitarian Neal Bermas behind the project gives disadvantaged youths a chance at doing well in life by providing extensive training, which allows them to work at STREETS and then continue on into successful careers in the restaurant and hospitality industries. Dishes served are of the highest standards, and the atmosphere exceptionally inviting - one might struggle to find a table in the evenings.

Photo: Kzenon/Shutterstock.com

Address: 17 Lê Lợi, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Opening hours: Daily 12-22

Phone: www.streetsinternational.org

Internet: <https://www.streetsinternational.org>

Vy's Market Restaurant & Cooking School

Vy's is an exciting delve into Vietnamese street food, its many varieties served at several open-kitchen style indoor stands. The entire experience is carefully manicured and completely sanitary, which takes away possible worry associated with eating off the side of the roads. There are plenty of options to choose from, from 'classics' such as bahn mi to more peculiar delights such as half-hatched duck eggs, silk worm and jellyfish salad, or braised pig brain; one can even choose to have a typical local worker's meal.

In the evenings, they conduct incredibly popular, great value cooking classes (sign up required).

Photo: IRA_EVVA/Shutterstock.com

Address: 3 Nguyễn Hoàng, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3926 926

Internet: <https://www.facebook.com/pages/Vys-Market-Restaurant-and-Cooking-School/1538882503048022>

Nu Eatery

Hidden in plain sight (turn right after crossing the Japanese Bridge from east to west), this compact restaurant serves up beautiful Asian Fusion cuisine without pretence, with a few imaginative takes on Vietnamese staples unique to the establishment. Come for lunch to enjoy the place nearly all to yourself.

Their daughter establishment Sea Shell just off Trang Hung Dao has also gained a loyal following in recent years.

Photo: Efired/Shutterstock.com

Address: 10A Nguyễn Thị Minh Khai, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Opening hours: Mon-Sat 12-21

Phone: +84 825 190 190

Miss Ly Cafe

Arrive outside of rush hour (prepare for a wait otherwise) at this genuine restaurant serving up traditional local specialities in a (traditionally) non-air conditioned space. The cafe enjoys a great popularity despite not being located in the old town core: no wonder, for the 'cao lau', white rose dumplings, bahn mi and spring rolls it serves up could go for much more than their price tag.

Photo: LukeT/Shutterstock.com

Address: 22 Nguyen Hue St, Hoi An

Phone: +84 90 523 48 64

Morning Glory

A wildly popular, longstanding restaurant smack in the heart of Hoi An that serves up dishes most commonly eaten in central Vietnam. Special emphasis is placed on authenticity of flavours and cooking methods, plus street food dishes.

Photo: Warut Sappakitpinyo/Shutterstock.com

Address: 106 Nguyễn Thái Học, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Opening hours: Daily 10-23

Phone: +84 235 2241 555

CAFES

Supatratpat/Shutterstock.com

The cafe scene of Hoi An is incredibly robust, and with Vietnam famously being one of the world's largest coffee producers, each coffee shop in Hoi An enjoys the freedom to brew its own unique blend. Coffee is often served iced, so do mention if you would rather have it hot. The typical local brew is made using a small metal drip filter that's placed directly on top of the cup, and then receives a generous splash of condensed milk to help conceal the bitter notes that sometimes come through (especially in cheaper beans).

If you're feeling adventurous, order a 'cà phê sữa chua' (yogurt coffee) or 'cà phê trứng', which is a caffeinated drink with a heavy base of whipped egg yolks, sweetened with condensed milk.

Ly Thuong Kiet Street

Ly Thuong Kiet runs parallel to the river, a few blocks north of Hoi An's Ancient Town. The street is well-known to coffee lovers for the incredible variety of coffee shops (and cafes) that line it.

Photo: Juthamas Jitpirom/Shutterstock.com
Address: Lý Thường Kiệt, Hoi An

Reaching Out Teahouse

There's beauty in every detail at Reaching Out Teahouse, from the exquisite ornate tableware to the establishment's mission: to offer employment to people with speech and hearing impediments, who make up the staff almost exclusively. Each table is served wooden blocks with various handy expressions inscribed on them (words like 'thank you' or 'bill') which aid in communication, and orders are placed by filling out a form. Guests are encouraged to keep their voices down to a whisper (or even refrain from talking entirely). The Vietnamese tea and coffee tasting sets are very reasonably priced and highly recommended; the cookie sampler can be shared by two.

Photo: Vo Hieu/Shutterstock.com
Address: 131 Trần Phú, Phường Minh An, Hội An
Phone: +84 90 521 65 53
Internet:
<https://reachingoutvietnam.com/teahouse/the-teahouse>

Mia Coffee

An expat favourite, Mia Coffee is loved for its shaded outdoor terrace, air-conditioned second floor and illy espressos prepared Italian-style (for those mornings when a traditional Vietnamese drip simply won't cut it).

Photo: ImageBySutipond/Shutterstock.com
Address: 20 Đường Phan Bội Châu, Cẩm Châu, Hội An
Phone: +84 90 555 20 61
Internet: <https://miacoffee.vn>

The Espresso Station

The Espresso Station dazzles with creativity and innovation: their menu features some of the most whimsical drinks around, from their signature 'dark soul latte' with activated charcoal (which makes the drink appear black) to coffee served in frozen cubes, with hot creamy milk on the side. You can still get Vietnamese classics, such as the 'phin' drip or expertly crafted egg coffee. There's a beetroot latte for those who don't favour caffeine.

Photo: MISS TREECHADA YOKSAN/Shutterstock.com
Address: 28/2 Trần Hưng Đạo, Phường Minh An, Hội An
Phone: +84 90 569 11 64
Internet: <https://www.theespressostation.com>

Hoi An Roastery

A reliable local coffee shop chain, Hoi An Roastery is one you can safely rely on for a good cup. They offer both Italian-style and Vietnamese coffees, from potent espresso and siphon to egg-yolk coffee, plus a selection of light breakfast and lunch foods. There are 7 strategic locations across town, the most popular one at Le Loi 47.

Photo: HeadSpinPhoto/Shutterstock.com
Address: 47 Lê Lợi, Minh An, Tp. Hội An
Phone: +84 235 3927 727
Internet: <http://hoianroastery.com>

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Midori9813/Shutterstock.com

A typical evening meet up location for local residents is, interestingly, a coffee shop, since coffee is seen as a perfectly suitable drink to be had in the p.m. If you're looking to truly embrace local ways, try one of the spots listed in this guide under "Cafes".

Even though Hoi An isn't exactly the place for rowdy parties, below is a shortlist of the town's prime locations for drinks and live music.

White Marble Wine Bar

This centrally located wine bar attracts expats and tourists with its well-furnished wine list (reportedly, the most extensive in Hoi An), a relaxing evening ambience, and irresistible sharing platters (Vietnamese snacks and cheese assortments to accompany the wine).

Photo: Kitti Tantibankul/Shutterstock.com

Address: 98 Lê Lợi Street, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3911 862

Internet: <https://www.facebook.com/whitemarblehoian/>

Dive Bar

While dive bars aren't normally known to attract too many actual divers, Hoi An's Dive bar begs to differ: located on site of the Cham Islands Diving Centre, the place draws in plenty of diving enthusiasts, as well as backpackers and travellers with no particular affinity for being submerged. The back garden is supremely inviting, much like the laid-back atmosphere.

Photo: waclawmostowski/Shutterstock.com

Address: 88 Nguyễn Thái Học, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3910 782

Internet: <http://vietnamscubadiving.com/dive-bar-hoi-an/>

Tap House

Tap House is an all-around great option for a night out in Hoi An. They serve a wide range of Vietnamese craft beers, which often go by the flight (request a tasting assortment). The space is refreshingly air conditioned and they do good snacks, including assorted cold cut and cheese sharing platters.

Photo: Nate Luebbe/Shutterstock.com

Address: 03 Phan Chu Trinh, Cẩm Châu, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3910 333

Internet: www.taphousehoian.com

Soul Kitchen

This An Bang Beach fixture has gained popularity in recent years, not so much a restaurant, which it is by day, but more of a venue for a great night out. The key ingredients to its success are the breezy waterfront location (and a pleasantly relaxed vibe, by extension), regular live music shows, and a drink list that includes craft beers.

Photo: Gunter Nuyts/Shutterstock.com

Address: An Bang Beach, Hoi An

Opening hours: Daily 8.00-23.00

Phone: +84 90 644 03 20

Internet: www.soulkitchen.sitew.com/#Soul.A

Hoi An Night Market

From 6 to 9 pm daily, Hoi An's Nguyen Hoang Street transforms into a 300-metre long bustling night market, unfolding underneath a myriad of colourful lanterns. It's a great place to stock up on souvenirs: prices are low and can get even lower for those with haggling skills.

Photo: LeQuangNhut/Shutterstock.com

Address: Nguyen Hoang, Hoi An

SHOPPING

Paitoon Keatkeereerut/Shutterstock.com

Hoi An packs a treasure trove of exquisite boutiques that sell a wide array of locally-made products, which range from silver jewellery to ornamental paper lanterns, silk pieces, artwork, and more (some even have a workshop open to visitors on site); a large number of local tailor shops offer to-order clothing, bags, and even shoes of excellent quality and at unbeatable prices.

Every night (from roughly 18 to 21-22) sees a market set up along Nguyen Hoang Street, where all manner of souvenirs and street foods are on sale.

There is also a remarkable number of businesses in Hoi An which work for a good cause, employing and selling wares of disadvantaged or physically impaired artists and creators.

Pheva Chocolate

The elegant chocolate assortments sold at Pheva make for great gifts and souvenirs. Their chocolate is made exclusively from beans grown in the southern Vietnamese region of Ben Tre, and then enhanced with a touch of Madagascar vanilla and a variety of flavours ranging from white pepper to the signature dark sesame and peanuts. Pick and choose from individual pieces to create a set that best suits your taste.

Photo: Sirisak_baokaew/Shutterstock.com

Address: 74 Trần Hưng Đạo, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3925 260

Internet: www.phevaworld.com

Tailor Shops

Tailor-made clothing is big in Hoi An, and many visitors eagerly take advantage of the incredible price-to-quality ratio offered by local tailor shops. Getting a garment made will normally entail an initial consultation, where you discuss the desired piece and its design, followed by as many fittings as needed to ensure the final product complies with all the requirements. Customers are also free to select their fabrics of choice.

Some trusted local tailors include A Dong Silk, Hoang Kim, Kimmy and Yaly. If you're in the market for custom-made shoes or bags, try The Friendly Leather Bag Shop or Tu-Chi Leather Bags.

Fabrics and private tailoring are also offered at the Hoi An Central Market; having a garment made here will cost less, but will likely not be up to the same high standards kept to by specialised tailor shops.

Photo: Birdiegal/Shutterstock.com

Reaching Out

This ethical craft and souvenir shop supports artists with disabilities, selling their original designs while making a tangible impact into the lives of disadvantaged local creators. The wares themselves are of excellent quality, and range from silver jewellery (which is a great buy here) to linens, tableware and home decor pieces.

Photo: Walaiporn Paysawat/Shutterstock.com

Address: 103 Nguyễn Thái Học, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3910 168

Internet: <https://reachingoutvietnam.com>

Artbook

A great little store to browse through for fun Vietnam-themed gifts and souvenirs that aren't your typical Chinese imports. Some of their best buys include wallets made from recycled storage bags, high-quality retro posters on rice paper, and unique postcard collections. They also stock a fantastic selection of books on all things Vietnam (in English).

Photo: Aoshi VN/Shutterstock.com

Address: 166 Trần Phú, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3910 225

Internet: <http://artbook.com.vn/>

Phan Boi Chau Street (Rue des Arts)

Formerly the main street of Hoi An's French Quarter, Phan Boi Chau is currently going through a renaissance: art galleries, exhibition spaces and sophisticated craft boutiques have opened shop here, bringing the street to the forefront of the town's cultural life. There is a free guide to the area's venues that can be picked up free of charge.

Photo: Reggie Lee/Shutterstock.com

Hoi An Central Market

The bustling Hoi An market takes a little getting used to: it's distinctly more hectic than the downtown area, and teems with local vendors and shoppers as much as it does with tourists. Abundant Asian herbs, souvenirs like lacquered coconut shell bowls, Vietnamese coffee-makers and traditional cone hats are some of the wares on sale. Of particular interest are the indoor food stands serving up scrumptious snacks at some of the lowest prices in town.

Photo: Curioso/Shutterstock.com

Address: 73 Phan Bội Châu Sơn Phong tp. Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3861 323

Hoi An Night Market

From 6 to 9 pm daily, Hoi An's Nguyen Hoang Street transforms into a 300-metre long bustling night market, unfolding underneath a myriad colourful lanterns. It's a great place to stock up on souvenirs: prices are low and can get even lower if you don't hesitate to haggle: prices can go down up to 70% from starting level.

Photo: LeQuangNhut/Shutterstock.com

Address: 3 Nguyễn Hoàng, Phường Minh An, Hội An

Opening hours: Daily 18-22

TOURIST INFORMATION

R.M. Nunes/Shutterstock.com

Passport / Visa

Short stays that do not require a visa (some as short as 15 days) are possible for citizens of Cambodia, Indonesia, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, The Philippines, Brunei, Myanmar, Belarus, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Norway, Russia, South Korea, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom. Citizens of Chile can enter the country for 90 days, visa-free.

Citizens of a further 46 world countries, including most countries in the Americas, Eastern Europe and Australia, are eligible for an E-visa as of February 2017. These are granted for a period of 30 days. To confirm whether or not you will need a visa to enter Vietnam, please contact your local consulate.

Different rules may apply to cruise ship passengers on shore excursions. In late 2019, temporary visa slips could be obtained directly on board for a very small fee (under the condition that Vietnam is only visited as part of a cruise itinerary with a final destination elsewhere).

Photo: TukTuk Design/Shutterstock.com

Best Time to Visit Hoi An

The 14th day of each lunar month sees Hoi An celebrate a Full Moon Festival, wherein streets get flooded with lit paper lanterns, food stalls and souvenir vendors, with traditional performances of song and dance held throughout town.

The two best months to visit Hoi An are February and March, when temperatures are at their most comfortable. Heat starts to set in following April, and it gets progressively hotter until July, when the rainy season begins.

Photo: VectorA/Shutterstock.com

Hoi An Ancient Town Entrance Ticket

A ticket is required in order to be admitted into the Ancient Town, although this is not strictly enforced if you are only planning to take stroll along the streets. If you plan to visit any attractions, a ticket is most definitely required; each ticket comes with 5 slips for any of the operating attractions of your choice (these include assembly halls, old merchant homes, etc.).

Kiosks selling such tickets are spread through the old town and are yellow in colour, with a red sign. Each ticket is valid for 24 hours.

The price as of 2019 is 120,000 VND (~ 5 USD).

Photo: IconLauk/Shutterstock.com

Getting Around Hoi An

Cycling is by far the easiest and cheapest way of getting around Hoi An during daylight hours, especially if your destination is not within walking distance (although this is rarely the case within town limits).

When heading further afield (or after dark) you will most likely require a cab. There have been reports of local drivers refusing to turn on the meters or even refusing trips altogether for short distances, in which case you can either walk further down the road and try a different cab or call an operator to order the cab to come pick you up (although this may be difficult if you don't speak the language). You could also try negotiating a fare that suits both in advance.

Mai Linh is known to have been a reliable company, although they have been getting mixed reviews lately. Grab is the local equivalent of Uber and is another option for getting around, but not speaking the language can be an obstacle here, too: it's best if you have your hotel's business card and/or a working map on your mobile to ease communication with drivers.

As a last resort there are the 'xich lo' pedicabs, although these are much better suited for leisurely sightseeing tours rather than a functional way of getting from point A to B. This one is exclusively used by tourists.

Photo: Agor2012/Shutterstock.com

Da Nang International Airport

Da Nang International Airport is the air hub closest to Hoi An, located at around 40km from town, which makes for just under an hour's drive.

The best options for reaching Hoi An from here include a pre-arranged transfer (some hotels offer this service), getting a taxi upon arrival (make sure to agree on the fare in no uncertain terms prior to starting the journey), or a shared shuttle bus offered by several local operators.

Your Local Booking

www.yourlocalbooking.com

Hoi An Express

http://hoianexpress.com.vn/ha/st_activity/shuttle-bus-da-nang-to-hoi-an-one-way

Photo: Juan Garces

Address: Hòa Thuận Tây, Hải Châu District, Da Nang

Phone: +84 236 3823 397

Internet: <https://www.vietnamairport.vn>

Pharmacy

Most common medicines can be purchased without much difficulty in Hoi An. If you require medical attention or medication that isn't available locally, your best bet is nearby Da Nang.

Huy Hoang 1 Pharmacy:

Photo: Gemma Garner

Address: 4c Trần Hưng Đạo, Sơn Phong, Hội An

Opening hours: Mon-Sun 8.00-21.00

Phone: +84 235 3861 752

Boat

Rowing and motor boats can be hired privately for excursions; boats are normally docked along the riverfront between the Cam Nam and An Hoi

Bridges in central Hoi An.

Photo: Aayam 4D/Shutterstock.com

Post

Packages can be shipped worldwide via Vietnam Post, which is relatively reliable but can take up to several months to deliver parcels (3-4 weeks by air mail). Dai Nam postal service is another alternative local shipping provider.

As of February 2019, there is also a DHL Express shipping station in Hoi An, which is a reliable way to send documents and valuables.

Photo: Andy Fuchs

Address: 06 Trần Hưng Đạo, Sơn Phong, Hội An

Phone: +84 235 3862 888

Telephone

+84 (country code) 235
(Hoi An code)

Photo: Jardson Almeida

Electricity

220 V /50Hz, plug types A, C & F Most plugs with two pins (both flat and round) will work in Vietnam; three-pin plugs will require an adaptor.

Photo: Stirling Tschan

Population

152,160

Currency

Vietnamese dong
(25,000 VND ~ 1 USD)

Newspapers

Tuoi Tre News (<https://tuoitrenews.vn>)
Vietnam Insider (<https://vietnaminsider.vn>)

Emergency numbers

Police: 113
Fire: 114
Ambulance: 115
Search & Rescue: 112

Tourist information

Tourist Support Centre
51 Phan Chu Trinh, Ph ng Minh An, H i An +84 235 3916 961
Daily 7.30-20.00