THE REGION

LaMiaFotografia/Shutterstock.com

Although Klosters is a popular ski resort for the glitterati, it still retains its charm as a typical down-to-earth, picturesque Alpine village in the heart of the Swiss Graubünden district. Snow-capped mountains, bright blue skies and crisp fresh air offer travellers a peaceful and scenic getaway from the buzz of city life. Klosters' Alpine location in the Prattigau Valley near the Austrian border, gives it breath-taking scenic beauty, making it a perfect holiday destination, whether it's a romantic weekend break or an active family holiday.

The small, friendly farming town of Klosters is situated in south-east Switzerland, within the trilingual canton of the Grisons - the highest region in the Alps - and is a mere 13km away from Davos, which is in turn the highest town in Europe. To get a better idea of Klosters' geographical bearings, the town is surrounded by the Silvretta massif to the east, the Parsenn-Klosters region to the south, the Prattigau valley opening to the west and the Madrisa region to the north.

There are approximately 4000 inhabitants and the official language is German, yet English, French and Italian are widely spoken. Although Klosters originated around 1220AD, it was not until 1870 that it began to attract tourists with the construction of the first hotels and the Rhaetian railway line to Klosters (from Landquart) was built.

DO & SEE

Tupungato/Shutterstock.com

The easily accessible ski slopes accommodate skiers of all levels, yet there are plenty more activities, such as tobogganing, skating, tennis and snowboarding to keep you busy.

Klosters consists of seven districts which are Klosters Platz, Klosters Dorf, Selfranga, Aeuja, Monbiel, Serneus and Mezzaselva. Klosters Platz is the most popular of them all, being where most of the events and activities take place and where the tourist office is located. Klosters Dorf is situated 2km to the north and is smaller and quieter than its neighbouring district. Both districts are conveniently on the Landquart-Davos train line, and are also linked by town buses, which are free with the resort's Guest Card.

Tobogganing

Klosters is also very well known for its tobogganing - an activity for children and adults alike - and local legend has it that tobogganing was invented here. The four toboggan runs available (Gotschna, Madrisa, Alpenrosli, Aeuja) are free of charge - you just have to pay for toboggan rentals. With its four toboggan runs, Klosters offers fun for the whole family. You can opt for individual rides on the mountain trains, half day or full day rides.

The skiing resort

Klosters, with its fresh unpolluted air and quiet charm, offer travellers in search of a bit of peace and quiet in a restful escape from the scramble of modern life. Indeed, travellers include celebrities and even royalty - Klosters is reported to be the winter getaway of choice for Prince Charles. This resort is certainly fit for an heir to the throne with its beautiful scenery, active winter sports and reputable entertainment on offer. The resort has novice and advanced skiers flocking to its slopes, however, it is acknowledged to accommodate the intermediate skier best.
