Lübeck, a UNESCO World Heritage site since 1987, was one of the great mercantile cities in the Middle Ages. The Old Town island, surrounded by the river Trave and the canal, today still communicates the charm of a port.

Travemünde is one of the most beautiful sea resorts of Europe which already in 1802 transformed the former fishing- and sailor village into a top address for bathers from near and far. The fascinating sailing Old-timer "Passat", chugging deep-sea fishing boats and gigantic ferryboats can be admired on the Baltic Sea.

THE CITY

Lübeck, a UNESCO World Heritage site since 1987, was one of the great mercantile cities in the Middle Ages. Nowadays it offers what guests search for: a town small enough to be diverting, history to learn and a seaside for relaxing hours. The first impression is of soothing harmony. The width of the streets, the height of the roofs, and the length of time it takes to stroll across the market place have the right proportion. Since the 13th century the “city of seven spires” has been depicted with the same skyline of green-clad belfries rising above the red-tiled roofs.

Lübeck always was rather special: Queen of the Hanseatic trading league for 500 years, and today the gate to the Baltic Sea, to Scandinavia and the Baltic countries. Founded in 1143 by Adolf von Schauenburg and revived in 1157 by Heinrich “The Lion”, it was declared to be a self-governing imperial city back in 1226 by Kaiser Friedrich II, and retained this status right up until 1937. The Second World War left deep wounds. But the literal hanseatic frame of mind of the city's citizens has made it possible to restore the 7 famous spires, many merchants' houses, alleys, courtyards and cloisters.

And Lübeck's characteristic feature is water. The Old Town island, surrounded by the river Trave and the canal, today still communicates the charm and cosmopolitan approach of a port. Both the city ports and Europe's largest ferry terminal in Lübeck-Travemünde clearly demonstrate that time has not stood still here. Travemünde is one of the most beautiful and most appealing sea resorts of Europe which already in 1802 transformed the former fishing- and sailor village into a top address for bathers from near and far. With a stroll over the boulevard of the historical boardwalk, the fascinating sailing Old-timer “Passat”, chugging deep-sea fishing boats and gigantic ferryboats can be admired on the Baltic Sea very close to. The fine sandy beach with its 4,5 kilometres longitude from the Priwall up to the Brodten steep coast invites to an easygoing swim- and sunbath fun.

DO & SEE

Lübeck Tourismus

Tucked away behind the tall, steep-roofed and closely-packed houses built by prosperous merchants, lie tiny workers' cottages in a thread of narrow passageways. Meander among the ‘roses round the door’ almshouses of Glockengießerstraße, and behind the An der Obertrave quay, to discover hidden oases of pretty streets and enchanting courtyards. Cross bridges or take a river cruise for endless eye-catching views.

Holsten Gate

Behind the thick walls of Lübeck's famous Landmark an exhibition entitled "The Hanseatic League - The Power of Trade" invites you to a fascinating medieval world of global trade and seafaring. Incidentally, the city gate was equipped with 30 cannons in the late Middle Ages, but none has ever fired a single shot.

Lübeck Town Hall

Lübeck Town Hall is one of the most beautiful town halls in Germany. In 1230 its construction started right in the centre of the Old Town on the market. The dark bricks of the Town Hall make a striking contrast to the traditional red-brick construction of the surrounding buildings. The patricians extended the building several times, adding the magnificent freestone facade, the decorative balcony and the three towers, known locally as the "giants".

St. Peter's church

The Romanesque church was erected between 1227 and 1250. It is not used for church services any more. Nowadays the bright church hall holds events and exhibitions and during the Christmas season a beautiful craft market takes place inside. A very special view over the island-shaped Old Town - and on a good day even up to the Baltic sea - is offered from the 50 m high viewing platform of the St. Petri church tower.

St. Jacob's

St. Jacob's church is easy to recognise from a distance as it has four spherical globes on the tower's helm edge. The three-naved Gothic brick hall church (built in 1334) has been the church of seafarers since the Middle Ages. It was consecrated together with St. Mary's and St. Peter's. Since the church did not suffer any damage during the 2nd World War, the boxed pew and historic organ are still intact. The small "Stellwagen organ" is one of the best preserved examples of North German organs from the 16th century.

A lifeboat commemorates the sinking of the four-masted barque "Pamir" in 1957. It is located in the north tower chapel and represents the "National Memorial for Civilian Shipping" today.

Willy-Brandt-House Lübeck

Dramatic staging and multimedia services are used which allow visitors to gain a much better understanding of the German history of the 20th century. The permanent exhibition of the German Federal Chancellor Willy Brandt Foundation shows photos from all stages of the famous politician's life.

Official documents, which include the letter to John F. Kennedy written immediately after the Berlin Wall was built, and the manuscript of the government declaration from 1969 with the famous slogan "let's dare more democracy", are just as much part of the exhibition as Brandt's school leaving certificate or a letter to Nora, his daughter living in Norway.

Interview transcripts and newsreels show the public appearance of Willy Brandt from his time as mayor in Berlin up to his resignation as German Federal Chancellor.

UNIQUE SPOTS

LTM-Natalie Mucenieks

If you want to escape from the crowded touristy places and just enjoy some calm, relaxed moments, Lübeck offers you many possibilities to do so.

Liebesbrücke

The Liebesbrücke, which can be translated to lovebridge, is a pedestrian bridge that crosses the River Trave from the Wallstraße to the Old Town. This bridge is a very popular place to visit for those, who are in love. They bring a padlock with their initials written on it with them and hang it onto the bridge, while throwing the key into the river, to seal their endless love.

Brodten Steep Coast

place for long walks.

In the Middle Ages, beach pirates would light beacons to lure ships onto the sand banks just off the coast and would then plunder them.

Thankfully, these bleak times are long gone. In the 19th century, increasing numbers of summer visitors to the up-and-coming resort of Travemünde "discovered" the perfect excursion destination: the Hermannshöhe with its Seetempel gazebo.

From a paradise for beach pirates to a haven for sand martins - the Brodten steep coast with its strange cliff formations is a fantastic

The striated, sometimes towering cliffs of the Brodten steep coast stretch for 4 km. The whole area is known as the Brodtener Winkel and is a protected conservation area.

The Baltic Sea created the cliffs over the centuries - and the sea and wind still "nibble" away at the Brodten steep coast today. Up to a metre a year is eroded by the sea and washed up a couple of 100 m further down on the beaches of Travemünde or Priwall.

A bluff ("active cliff") occurs when the sea has free rein. It is directly exposed to the might of the waves and is used as a breeding ground by the rare sand martins, which nest in holes in the cliff face.

Towards Niendorf the southern part of the cliff becomes a "passive cliff" - the erosion here has largely ceased and the former steep cliff edge has been "reconquered" by thick vegetation.

Courtyards and Alleyways

Just like other big cities of the late Middle Ages and the beginning of modern times, Lübeck had a great number of daytellers and delivery boys. They chiefly lived in little houses called "Buden" (shacks), which were densely crowded on premises in street corners, at the back of townsmen's houses and in the inner parts of housing blocks.

Those hidden parts were called alleyways and alleyway quarter. Quickly the salesman, richer middle class and church men discovered how much there was to earn with a well embellished courtyard. Of course the trade with these little housing alleys and exorbitant rates prospered widely. Therein it was up to the owner how many families he cramped into the tiny flats and how many buildings he erected behind his own house. With the general growth of population during the second half of the 15th century Lübeck's population increased by 25%. This led to a pauperisation of a big part of the population and with it to an extended and modernised quarter of alleyways.

Towards the end of the 17th century Lübeck had more than 180 alleyways.

Today about 90 of them have survived. A few of the most popular ones are presented here:

Engelsgrube (Angel's path) - Where the English were called Angels

Hellgrüner und dunkelgrüner Gang - A green paradise in the backstreets

Lüingreens Gang (Fischergrube No. 38) - submerging in the labyrinth of alleys

Being so close to the coast, fish features strongly on Lübeck menus. Cod in mustard sauce is a speciality and plaice is popular, as are tiny brown Baltic shrimps and herrings in many guises. In spring, feast on fresh asparagus. Rote Grütze, a compote of red fruits served with vanilla ice cream, is the favoured dessert.

Do try Lübecker Rotspon, a red wine imported young from France, aged and mellowed in oak casks in Lübeck. Historic merchants' houses provide the setting for some of the most memorable meals, and on warm summer nights it's pleasantly relaxing to eat in restaurants with courtyards and gardens.

Seafarers' Guild

The only ships in this harbour dangle in the air, and it is no longer a port of call exclusively for sailors. The Seafarers' Guild is one of the oldest buildings in town. This is the perfect place to experience the seafaring tradition of the Hanseatic League while having lunch or dinner. The captains of the Seafarers' Guild still meet here every Tuesday.

In summer take a seat in the beautiful garden with a view of the church tower of St. Jacob's.

Wullenwever

Roy Petermann, in his elegant 16th-century house, has established himself as one of the finest chefs in Northern Germany. Son of a distinguished culinary family, he has brought a refined and imaginative cuisine to Lübeck. Chandeliers and oil paintings enhance the ambience and, in summer, tables overflow onto a flower-filled courtyard. Using only the best and freshest produce, his dishes have subtle depths of flavor and texture. Game is featured in the autumn, and seafood is always available. Specialties include sautéed sole with capers and lemon butter, or grilled swordfish with eggplant and sweet peppers. So much skill is recognized internationally: with 17 points in "Gault Millau" and one star in the prestigious restaurant guide "Guide Michelin".

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

ARENA Creative / Shutterstock.com

Lübeck's bars range from the traditional bierkeller to the trendy Italian-style café-bars that serve up coffee and food all day and in the evening take on a complete change of atmosphere, becoming lively bars, often with DJ's or live music. Most close around 1 am, some stay open until 3 am on Saturday nights.

In summer, people flock to the Strandsalon (Beach Club) at the tip of the Wallhalbinsel peninsula for music, films and cocktails.

The weekend starts on Thursday, a popular night out for locals as they warm up for serious Friday and Saturday partying. Theme nights ensure that there's always a good variety of music styles, and summer brings beach parties and rock and pop festivals around Media-Docks. Mühlenstrasse is a good for bar-hopping - the 'in' place is a multi-storey car park. Clubs open from around 10 pm until 2 am, 3 am, or later.

Brauberger

At Brauberger you can see the beer being brewed in copper vats at the heart of this traditional brewhouse cellar, which dates from 1225. If you are feeling hungry there is a food menu offering German food.

Travemünde Sailing Week

Travemünde Sailing Week - that's regattas and popular festival, the sea always in view, cheerful music in your ear and the aroma of tasty dishes in your nose. Once a year, the who's who of sailing meet in Travemünde to compete on the waves of the Baltic Sea in a stiff breeze. And as a spectator, you can be there live when the sails glide over the water and the applause breaks out on the promenades. Every year, the sailing is accompanied by a lively festival on land. Then the resort becomes a stage and live music sounds from every corner. Stroll down the promenade directly on the waterfront, never losing sight of the lively comings and goings on the water. This is not just a celebration of sailing but also of joie de vivre. This is how we want it to be again in 2021. It's still too early to say what the 2021 Travemünde Sailing Week will look like. Some concepts may have to be adjusted and it may not be possible to repeat all the cherished elements from previous years in the exact same form. What is without doubt, though, is that all concerned will be doing everything to make this popular sporting event possible.

Christmas Markets in Lübeck

In this Christmas period of anticipatory pleasure and longing for warmth and comfort, there is no such thing as too much. Gold, glitter and red wherever you look, the smell of almonds in the air, bells ringing and flurries of snowflakes. At Christmas, you are allowed to take your fill! Countless Christmas stars, lights and decorated trees turn the dark days into an enchanted time and warm the cockles of our hearts. Our Christmas Worlds in the UNESCO World Heritage Old Town are guaranteed to offer you to your own perfect moment of Christmas happiness. Whether chatting to the craftsmen when buying a hand-made product, over a glass of spicy mulled wine under the pillory, on the arm of your loved one on the giant Ferris wheel or at an organ concert in one of our Gothic churches.

Brahms Festival

Every year, classical strains drift through Lübeck's Old Town alleys when Lübeck's Academy of Music stages the Brahms Festival which is famous beyond state boundaries. The festival was launched in 1991 when the Brahms Institute was founded at Lübeck's Academy of Music - now one of the most prestigious Brahms research venues in the world. At this music festival, professors and talented students at the Academy of Music take to the stage together to interpret the works of the composer Johannes Brahms and his contemporaries. An innovative programme under the motto "Frühlingserwachen!" (Spring awakening) awaits you in the anniversary year of 2021 from May 1 - 9.

SHOPPING

Torben Conrad / Lübeck Tourismus

Lübeck is famous for marzipan, and Café Niederegger on Breite Straße is the place to buy it - in 300 varieties! Beautifully packaged it makes delicious gifts. Take a look at the life-sized marzipan figures in the Marzipan Salon while you're there.

From the Town Hall, the busy town centre shopping streets are pedestrianised.

There's a wealth of individually-owned shops on Huxstraße and Fleischhauerstraße, two of the city's most attractive shopping streets. These, and other side streets leading off the pedestrian precinct, are the place to look for designer fashion, accessories and jewellery.

Hüxstraße and Fleischhauerstraße

Hüxstraße and Fleischhauerstraße in the heart of the city provide an enchanting mix of small and up-market shops with a great deal of Olde Worlde charm.

By turning into the so-called "rib streets" away from the hustle and bustle of Breite Straße, you will enter into the narrow brick world of old Lübeck and will find many treasures within the winding lanes. Fleischhauerstraße and "Hüx" - as it is called by the locals - are two good examples of how an extremely vibrant shopping culture all of its own can develop away from the classic boulevards. The traders are often in listed buildings and know exactly how to use the limited space to display their wares without losing the historical atmosphere.

There is a higher-than-average number of owner-run shops which means that many purchases earn the "typically Lübeck" title which makes them a great gift for yourself or your loved ones.

Königstraße

Königstraße lies parallel to the pedestrian area of Breite Straße. Culture meets trade here and modern hustle and bustle meets historic façades.

Shopping, suppliers replenishing stocks mingled with busy Lübeckers on the way to their next appointment - it all goes on here. When you shop here, you are right in the thick of true Lübeck everyday life.

Mühlenstraße and Koberg are connected by the long shopping mile but it also has many other different guises. Real treasure troves such as Boutique Geoffreys, the furniture shop Gunilla or the goldsmiths "das kleine kra" sit like small pearls dotted along a chain of everyday use. But differences exist here too. Even if you're just really looking for a nice birthday card, you'll often end up in the in-house gallery at Hünicke again, or looking for a few new towels in Betten Struve with its spacious and light-filled premises. It all can turn into a relaxing time-out away from the bustling crowded streets. A real Must for any Lübecker is a quick detour into Buchhaus Hugendubel. You'll find that the contents of many a Lübecker's entire living room bookcase - spanning pre-school reading to the first romantic novel up to current political biographies - all came from here.

If from here you go towards Koberg, you will be getting closer to some of the top artistic addresses in Königstraße. One of these is the Löwen Apotheke with its listed façade and magical conversions in its interior. But it is in the Kunsthaus Lübeck with selected works of Classical Modern and contemporary art where it all really comes together. And when strolling through the exhibitions in the Behnhouse diagonally opposite, you can quite well imagine how a time-honoured Lübeck merchant must have felt in his own home.

After so many impressions, a little light refreshment sounds good. Pop into one of the small side streets such as Pfaffenstraße or Glockengießerstraße for this. You'll find the the Günter Grass-House there too, by the way, as well as the Chocolaterie Amaro - two of Lübeck's finest Old Town tips!

Breite Straße

There's no way fashion victims and shopping friends can get round it: The Breite Straße in Lübeck is only accessible to pedestrians and is a welcome spot for bargain hunters with its broad pavements and great variety of shops.

Famous brands such as Esprit, Gerry Weber, Hallhuber and Street One are all in close proximity to the shopping Mecca of Karstadt and also the popular TKMaxx outlet store. The most widely used "gateway" to the Breite Straße is "Kohlmarkt". The Haerder Center is a shopping mall with many trendy labels and stores, for example the only Pandora store in Lübeck. The center is located along with the traditional shoe shop Schümann which offers shoes for the entire family over its three floors. Of course, there are also jewellers and perfume shops. And the parent company of the most famous Lübeck delicacy is located here: Café Niederegger, the birthplace of marzipan.

With so much choice, carrier bags often tend to become rather heavy. Perfect for taking a quick break. Relax with a cup of coffee and a slice of cake in the heart of the pedestrian area and enjoy a bit of people-watching, too. Traditional restaurants such as the Seafarer's Guild are great for a longer time-out or look out for a sunny spot in the square with an exclusive view of the historic Town Hall.

Markets & regional products

Shopping in Lübeck isn't just done indoors. Besides the weekly market and the tourist market right at the foot of the Town Hall, practically every district has its own weekly market. The open-air shopping centres are genuine suppliers of fresh seasonal fruit and veg and provide a beneficial exchange between Lübeck and its surrounding area. Potatoes, apples, asparagus, strawberries or cabbage all thrive in the immediate surrounding areas and only have a short distance to travel to the consumer. This is sustainability from its best side.

The following markets can be found in the Lübeck city. You are bound to find one nearby:

from 8 am - 1 pm respectively:

Mon: Meesenkaserne and Travemünde

Tues: Brink

Wed: Brolingsplatz, Hasenweg and Schlutup, Mecklenburger Straße

Thurs: Meesenkaserne, Brink, Travemünde

Fri: Hanseplatz, Moisling and Kücknitz, Kirchplatz

Sat: Brolingsplatz and Brink

from 10.30 am - 7.00 pm respectively

Mon: Markt/Rathausmarkt

Thurs: Markt/Rathausmarkt

from 2.00 pm - 5.00 pm respectively

Fri: Buntekuh, opposite from Buntekuh shopping centre

Travemünde:

1st May - 30th Sept: 8.00 am - 2.00 pm

1st Oct - 30th April: 8.00 am - 1.00 pm

Rotspon

The tradition of Lübeck as a wine trading town goes back to the 14th century. At that time, the great need for salt to preserve herring created a lively trade between Lübeck and the Bay of Biscay coast. Initially, barrels of red Bordeaux wine were loaded from the salt ships as a side load. These wines were given the popular name "Rotspon"; and quickly gained great popularity. The circle of customers of the Lübeck wine trade extended from northern Germany along the Baltic coast to the Baltic states and Finland. The designation "Lübecker Rotspon"; applies to red wines of French origin which are brought loosely to Lübeck and bottled according to old tradition.

Sleeping on the beach

In Travemünde a childhood's dream comes true! During the summer months you can book a fantastic night under the stars in the two-sleeper-beach-basket. In this specially designed beach furniture which measures 1,40 m you sleep directly at the beach and listen to the nightly sea on your own or together with your partner - feelings of happiness are included. Of course, you can also book the beach chair just for a day. A tarpaulin protects you from sun, wind and weather and from prying eyes. For the night you can close the beach chair completely. Two portholes allow you the view on the sea and the stars. Cuddly bed linen, a bottle of water and the magazin "Treasure up" for your evening read are part of the standard equipment

Tourist Information

If you need a hotel booking, tickets for an event or are on the lookout for a good restaurant for an evening meal, then just stop by the Tourist Information at Holsten Gate or call. The adjoining shop has travel literature on Lübeck and beautiful postcards, as well as many wonderful gifts and souvenirs. You will find the answer to all your questions in the Tourist Office, pick-up brochures and detailed city maps, as well as making hotel reservations and getting sightseeing tips. The city guided tour also starts right in front of the Welcome Center at Holsten Gate. A small exhibition area rounds off the services and there is also a children's play area. The information terminal in front of the entrance offers 24h access to the information and reservation system of Lübeck und Travemünde Marketing GmbH with important Lübeck information and hotel booking option.
