Opatija Tourist Board

Opatija, often called the queen of the Adriatic, is one of Croatia's most famous destinations, boasting a tradition of welcoming visitors dating back more than 175 years.

Located at the edge of the Mediterranean, on the slopes of Mount Učka gently descending towards the coast of Kvarner Bay, Opatija with its local climate, beautiful architecture, boutique hotels and luxurious, well-tended parks and promenades, offers plenty of possibilities for a pleasant stay throughout the year.

Get to know Opatija, and let Opatija get to know you!

OPATIJA RIVIERA

Opatija Tourist Board

The Opatija Riviera is a place that according to Slavic mythology was chosen by the gods who inhabited the slopes of Mount Učka, and it was also a resort for kings and emperors in the late 19th century. Today, it still offers spectacular scenery and royal treatment to every visitor. The Riviera is named after Opatija, a town that was the cradle of modern European tourism and which has for more than 170 years been considered one of the most elite Mediterranean destinations.

It would be wrong to assume that the history of tourism on the Opatija Riviera can be found only in museums. It is within the reach of every visitor to the town, so why not take the opportunity to learn more about this tradition?

We invite you to take a walk along the Lungomare coastal promenade just like the Emperor Franz Joseph did in the past. After all, this promenade today bears his name. You can also pay a visit to the local cafés to sample desserts that in the past were only served in Opatija and at the Viennese Court, or admire the sunrise while listening to the murmur of the sea and taking in the fragrant scent of laurel, just like so many couples in love before...

Seventeen decades of tourism in this area are a guarantee of quality of service, as the local tourism professionals are particularly proud of their tradition and have carefully handed down knowledge from generation to generation. The hotel business on the Opatija Riviera, which started in 1884 with the construction of the Hotel Kvarner (the first hotel on the Croatian Adriatic), today still continues the "old school" tradition in which the guest always comes first. It is therefore no wonder that many visitors return again and again, and that some of them even find their home away from home here.

Opatija

Throughout the year, Opatija not only offers its visitors leisure but also various creative activities in the town's museums and galleries, numerous events and concerts at the spectacular Open Air Theatre, and a wide range of wellness & spa services and facilities in its hotels. Discovering the town's cultural and historical heritage or strolling along the Lungomare coastal promenade or the Carmen Sylva forest promenade are particularly popular activities with visitors to the town, which is regarded by many as the "Queen of the Adriatic".

Volosko

Before Opatija became a holiday resort, Volosko was the seat of the district, an important trade port and the area's administrative centre. Today Volosko has lost that importance, but not its magical appeal as a picturesque fishing village, an inexhaustible source of inspiration to artists, a haven to those searching for peace in the narrow lanes of the old town, or for a cup of coffee on the waterfront, in the unique atmosphere of the harbour. There is something very special about the view of the sea from Volosko's waterfront: the whole Adriatic seems to open up towards the south from here...

When walking through the lanes in the historic part of the town, you will come across the monument commemorating Volosko as the birthplace of Andrija Mohorovičić, the world-famous scientist who first identified the discontinuity that separates the Earth's crust from the mantle. This layer is called the Mohorovičić Discontinuity, or Moho for short. He was born in the house at the very beginning of the Lungomare coastal promenade.

Today Volosko is also synonymous with fine gastronomy - from typical taverns offering fish and other traditional dishes of the local area, to superb gourmet restaurants that are listed in the most prestigious international restaurant guides - Volosko offers all of that, and much more. It is only a pleasant three-kilometre stroll along the coastal promenade from where you are now standing. Do not miss the chance to pay this enchanting place a visit!

Just like Volosko, Veprinac was also an important centre long before Opatija became a notable tourist resort. Probably built on the foundations of a pre-historic settlement, the origin of the name Veprinac is usually thought to be connected to the Croatian word for butcher's broom, a plant which grows abundantly in the area. The historic heritage of the town includes the Veprinac Law from 1507, a very important document that regulated the customs and legal issues of the time.

The old part of the town can be reached by passing the town gate with three arches, which is located in the former municipal building. On the right, in front of the town gate, is the loggia, and on the left is St. Anne's Chapel with an inscription from 1442. During recent restoration work, the remnants of some interesting frescoes were found on the walls inside the chapel, but these still need to be researched in more detail. The building right by the town gate hosts an ethnological collection presenting items, tools and documents that illustrate how people in this area used to live in the past.

The ascent up stone steps to the entrance to the church yard of St. Mark's parish church; the wonderful views of Kvarner Bay and Opatija on the sea side, and Mount Učka in the hinterland; the church yard where time seems to be standing still - this is Veprinac, the ancient town above Opatija Riviera where at every turn one can feel the nostalgic spirit of the times gone by. Just like the local poet Josip Stanić wrote in his verses - Veprinac seems to almost touch the heaven

Ika

Visitors to Ika can enjoy perfect peace and quiet – probably the most sought-after qualities on a holiday, and essential for escaping the stress of daily life. This small coastal town with a population of only several hundred is particularly proud of its fishing and shipbuilding traditions, which today make up part of the local tourism offer. Ika is also the university centre of the Opatija Riviera, as it is home to the internationally recognised Faculty of Tourism and Hospitality Management, which has educated hundreds of students from all over Croatia and abroad.

A special event is the Fish Festival, when visitors can experience what it means to live in a coastal place like this, as they have the opportunity to help fishermen repair their nets or place the fish traps, observe the fishing boats as they set out to sea, and then taste the freshly caught fish prepared by local chefs.

Ičići

The sea has always been the main resource for the people of Ičići ever since the ninth century BC when the Liburnians (an Illyrian tribe) used to build their fast ships along these coasts and then sail to North Africa and Asia Minor. Today, Ičići is most famous for its attractive beach and one of the best marinas in the Adriatic.

Ičići offers much more than just enjoying the beach and sea. Visitors can spend an action-packed holiday doing a variety of sports activities such as speedminton, sand volleyball, beach aerobics, tennis, paintball and football at the nearby campsite. For hiking enthusiasts, there are numerous marked trails leading up to Mount Učka that start in Ičići and end at the top of the highest mountain in Kvarner.

Opatija - An Oasis of Wellness And Wellbeing

01.03. - 31.05.2020.

Opatija was officially declared a climatic health resort for the aristocracy and prominent people of the time in 1889, and was the first of its kind in the entire Adriatic. Today, Opatija is one of the most popular wellness and health tourism destinations in Croatia and beyond.

After a cold winter, Opatija in March turns into a paradise for wellness lovers thanks to an annual series of events entitled "Opatija - An Oasis of Wellness and Wellbeing". Fantastic massages, facial and body treatments, relaxing baths and sauna sessions, as well as soothing aromatherapy are all here to help you restore your energy. Special daily offers, weekend getaways, and personalised holiday packages will pamper you regardless of the length of your stay.

Spring is the period when both nature and the human body awaken after the long and cold winter months. An additional impulse to invigorate body and spirit in Opatija is the 'Oasis of Wellness and Wellbeing' program, which combines the town's long tradition as a health resort with the offer of modern wellness treatments and activity holidays.

Empress Sisi's fashion closet Exhibition by Mónica Czédly

'I am a seagull of no land...' Elisabeth Amalie Eugenie of Bavaria (Sisi), Empress of Austria and Queen of Hungary and

Croatia

(1837-1898)

Everything has been long known.

The story of beautiful Sisi.

Concisely dated, precisely, and historically accurately ...

In every sense, trustworthy.

Supported by biographical information, dates and years:

her first encounter with the Emperor Franz Joseph, her wedding, coronation, personal tragedies, loss, wandering, melancholy, anorexia, and depression; her continuous refusal to adhere to the strict rules of court, ceremony and protocol, and her subservience to the cult of beauty.

A woman who constantly fled from her golden cage, haunted by ghosts from the past and bound by the shackles of the present and future.

And her absurd, tragic death.

And then everything repeated artistically...

Through art, theatre, film and literature.

The story of an Empress, a beautiful woman with a restless spirit in search of happiness.

And much, much later, and then again, somehow parallel...

Here she is.

Mónika Czédly.

Descendant of the once famous D'Elia Ferenc family fashion salon, established in 1886 in the most elite district of Budapest at Dorotty Street 8.

And this is where the initiation happens.

Little Monika is flipping through a book about Empress Elisabeth, attracted by a mysterious, inexplicable force, the call of beauty, and is unconsciously drawing Empress Elisabeth's coronation dress, which will come to light in 2009.

Monika sewed the first replica of a historical royal costume.

Soon afterwards, this resulted in a series of 14 dresses and several men's uniforms that transcended the notion of replica and replication. These are costume-objects that result in a kind of metaphysical, surreal beauty in intertwining combinations of different materials, shapes and colours, crafted perfectly, with an emphasis on detail that is always in the service of the visual whole.

As an ambient installation, these three-dimensional costume-objects interact with the space of the gallery and attest to a universal beauty that persists and is resistant to the passage of time.

"Vino i vruja" - Wine & Spring, August 2020

01.-02.08.2020. In the small coastal town of Ika, near Opatija, for the sixth year in a row, a unique event called Wine and Vruja is held. A group of enthusiasts bring the wines of renowned Croatian winemakers from the depths of the Ika bay, which have matured for one year under ideal conditions on the sources of the Ikari hot (spring) - vruja.

The Ikari hot is a geological phenomenon and represents the sources of distant sinkholes from the depths of the karst area, not only Učka but, it is assumed, the distant Alps. After rainy days, the hot "work", become active, and the bottom of the bay becomes plowed by streams of strong torrents from the depths. So hots bring the cold underground water in the bay, and because of the abundant water, the bay is a habitat rich in fish, especially sea bass and eels. Hot springs are also an ideal natural "cellar" for wine maturation.

Opatija Tourist Board

Villa Angiolina

With the arrival of Iginio Scarpa, a patrician from Rijeka and building of his summer house Villa Angiolina in 1844, Opatija opened her doors to a whole line of guests and passengers. This is the building that certainly marked the beginning of the tourist epoch in the history of Opatija.

St. James's Church

Most probably built in 1420, as a colony of Benedictine refugees from the Friulian monastery of Saint Peter in Rožac (San Pietro di Rosazzo), the entire settlement will later be named after this abbey. Today very little has been preserved of its original appearance.

Volosko

Before Opatija became a holiday resort, Volosko was the seat of the district, an important trade port and the area's administrative centre.

Today Volosko has lost that importance, but not its magical appeal as a picturesque fishing village, an inexhaustible source of inspiration to artists, a haven to those searching for peace in the narrow lanes of the old town, or for a cup of coffee on the waterfront, in the unique atmosphere of the harbour. There is something very special about the view of the sea from Volosko's waterfront: the whole Adriatic seems to open up towards the south from here...

When walking through the lanes in the historic part of the town, you will come across the monument commemorating Volosko as the birthplace of Andrija Mohorovičić, the world-famous scientist who first identified the discontinuity that separates the Earth's crust from the mantle. This layer is called the Mohorovičić Discontinuity, or Moho for short. He was born in the house at the very beginning of the Lungomare coastal promenade.

Today Volosko is also synonymous with fine gastronomy - from typical taverns offering fish and other traditional dishes of the local area, to superb gourmet restaurants that are listed in the most prestigious international restaurant guides - Volosko offers all of that, and much more. It is only a pleasant three-kilometre stroll along the coastal promenade from where you are now standing. Do not miss the chance to pay this enchanting place a visit!

Maiden with Seagull

On the promontory in front of the one-time cemetery a girl of stone extend her arm to a gull. This, however, is a new sculpture, the work of a sculptor Car, and it was erected here in 1956 and turned into one of Opatija's symbols.

Veprinac

Just like Volosko, Veprinac was also an important centre long before Opatija became a notable tourist resort. Probably built on the foundations of a pre-historic settlement, the origin of the name Veprinac is usually thought to be connected to the Croatian word for butcher's broom, a plant which grows abundantly in the area. The historic heritage of the town includes the Veprinac Law from 1507, a very important document that regulated the customs and legal issues of the time.

The old part of the town can be reached by passing the town gate with three arches, which is located in the former municipal building. On the right, in front of the town gate, is the loggia, and on the left is St. Anne's Chapel with an inscription from 1442. During recent restoration work, the remnants of some interesting frescoes were found on the walls inside the chapel, but these still need to be researched in more detail. The building right by the town gate hosts an ethnological collection presenting items, tools and documents that illustrate how people in this area used to live in the past.

The ascent up stone steps to the entrance to the church yard of St. Mark's parish church; the wonderful views of Kvarner Bay and Opatija on the sea side, and Mount Učka in the hinterland; the church yard where time seems to be standing still - this is Veprinac, the ancient town above Opatija Riviera where at every turn one can feel the nostalgic spirit of the times gone by. Just like the local poet Josip Stanić wrote in his verses - Veprinac seems to almost touch the heaven

The famous coastal promenade that stretches from Volosko to Lovran. Officially named the Franz Joseph I Promenade, it is still best known as the Lungomare. A walk along this promenade above all means enjoying the fresh sea air and a beautiful coastal landscape dotted with quaint coves, but it is also much more than that.

Konoba Tramerka

Konoba Tramerka is a place with heart and soul. We cook the same way as we do it at home, within our family, with ingredients that we either produce by ourselves or we find in the baskets and nets of local manufacturers and fishermen. The source of Tramerka's culinary ideas is primarily the richness of the Adriatic Sea in front of us. Yet we named our konoba after our favourite small island of Zadar archipelago. There is Učka mountain at our back – our second inspiration, and of course there is Istria – where our roots come from. We are grateful for having the best for our place from both sides, fresh and natural.
