Thiago Leite/Shutterstock.com

“Rio is a beauty. But São Paulo - São Paulo is a city,” said Marlene Dietrich about Brazil’s most cosmopolitan city. The city is Brazil’s cultural as well as financial powerhouse, complete with a vibrant music scene, top designer shopping and delicious fusion cuisine, not to mention museums and galleries on a par with any other world city. All this combined with the vibrant local life of Paulistanos, who will surely be easy to make friends with.

THE CITY

Filipe Frazao/Shutterstock.com

The third largest city in the world has 17 million people spread over an area of 30.000 square kilometres. São Paulo might be huge but it has humble beginnings. In 1554, Portuguese Jesuit priests founded a small mission on a hill close to the River Tietê, which soon became a trading post. Later, when the area around São Paulo was found to be perfect for growing coffee, the city's future prosperity was sealed. Today São Paulo is the business and unofficial political capital of the country.

A good place to orientate yourself in São Paulo is by Avenida Paulista, lined with high rise office buildings, which divides the city centre from São Paulo's exclusive and glamorous district, the Jardins, where you find the best hotels including Fasano and the Unique. From here, you can easily reach most parts of the city. Praça da Sé and Praça da República, the two squares divided by Vale do Anhangabaú is the old centre of São Paulo. On Rua Boa Vista, you will find the whitewashed Baroque Pátio do Colégio, the site of which dates back to the Jesuits first mission in 1554. Nearby, Triângulo is the city's main financial district and home to São Paulo's imposing stock exchange, the BOVESPA. A few blocks away you can find the calm of São Bento. North east is the imposing neo-gothic central market, the Mercado Municipal. South of here is the commercial district of Bela Vista, nicknamed Bixiga, and the city's "Little Italy" centred around Praça da Liberdade, now a centre for east Asian immigrants.

Rua Augusta slices across Avenida Paulista into the Jardins. Around Praça Franklin Roosevelt are many of the city's best shops and restaurants. South west of the Jardins is the fashionable neighbourhood of Pinheiros, with some of the best bars and nightclubs in the city. Across the Rio Pinheiros is the vast campus of the Universidade de São Paulo. South east from here is the huge green space of Parque Ibirapuera. To the east of the centre you find the barrias, once the industrial hub of the city. Of note here is the Museu da Hospedaria. North of here across the Rio Tietê is the city's main bus station, the Rodoviária Tietê.

DO & SEE

Filipe Frazao/Shutterstock.com

Most of São Paulo's main attractions are located in the city centre, the area bounded by the Tietê River on the North, the Pinheiros River to the West, Avenida dos Bandeirantes on the south and Avenida Salim Farah Maluf to the East. São Paulo has something for everyone, the culture vulture, the jazz fan, the clubber, the football fanatic and the gourmand. To take in the scale of São Paulo's history visit Pátio do Colégio to see its beginnings. Then visit legendary Brazilian architect and designer of Brasilia, Oscar Niemeyer's space-age OCA museum. For a breathtaking glimpse of where São Paulo is going, you cannot beat the view from the top of the Italia Building on Avenida Ipiranga at the corner of Avenida São Luís.

Parque do Ibirapuera

São Paulo's very own Central Park boasts over 2 million square meters of green space. The best way to explore it is to hire a bike. On Sunday mornings there are free music concerts in the Praça da Paz; the Museu de Arte Moderna, the superb Museu Afro Brasil and the OCA Auditorium are all at Gate 3.

DINING

stockcreations/Shutterstock.com

São Paulo's best restaurants are to be found in the Jardins, Itaim Bibi, Pinheiros, and Vila Madalena, where you can sample local bahian and mineiro cuisine, as well as international fusion dishes. However, for those on a smaller budget, R$5 can get you a delicious healthy meal at side street restaurants called lanchonetes, which are more a mix between a café and a bakery. But even in top restaurants, prices rarely exceed R$100.

The best non-Brazilian cuisine tends to be Middle Eastern, Korean and Chinese. Head to Liberdade for Japanese and Cerqueira César for Middle Eastern. The Portuguese restaurants are pretty spectacular too. Lunch is the most important meal of the day in Brazil so for the more popular restaurants, it is advisable to book a table in advance, even during the weeks.

Sarrasin

At this charming restaurant you can enjoy French dishes in a cosy atmosphere. Coming here you must try the galettes, a typical dish from Bretagne, consisting of crepes with various toppings, including savory ones like bacon and tomatoes. For a more substantial meal, try the filé mignon.

CAFÉS

Rawpixel.com/Shutterstock.com

Paulistanos are a fast-moving, dynamic bunch so there is an abundance of cafés and fast food outlets, from local Lanchonetes serving snacks and cheap meals to the inevitable MacDonalds and Subways. São Paulo does not have a big café tradition, but locals like to drink cafézinhos, small cups of strong, black coffee.

Ponto Chic

Ponto Chic is an atmospheric café that claims authorship to the Bauru sandwich - a tasty sandwich made with roast beef, salad and melted cheese. Apart from the legendary sandwich, Bauru serves other local fare meals in a rather casual setting. Home delivery offered.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

DisobeyArt/Shutterstock.com

The hometown of electro hipster group CSS, São Paulo's eclectic nightlife is the best in Brazil. Bela Vista has plenty of live music and draws a mixed crowd, while Vila Madalena and adjoining Pinheiros are full of trendy, bohemian-nightspots, and clubs where you can enjoy a Brahma beer and check out the scene. The Jardins offers upmarket bars for a more mature and LGBT crowd. Head to the bar at the Fasano for the best Caipirinha you are likely to taste anywhere. Itaim Bibi and Vila Olímpia are where you will find the trendy up and coming clubs. Wednesday and Thursday nights are very popular.

For listings of what is going on check weekly Veja magazine and www.obaoba.com.br.

All Black Irish Pub

All Black is an Irish outpost filled with football paraphernalia. The pub serves European lagers and stout as well as a large number of whiskeys. There is a happy hour most nights which draws large crowds. Serves some bar food such as fish and chips.

São Paulo-Guarulhos International Airport

The city is served by São Paulo-Guarulhos International Airport, sometimes called Cumbica, located 30 kilometres northeast of São Paulo.

Blue air-conditioned EMTU buses operate between the airport and the city centre. The buses stop at Tietê bus terminal, Praça da República, the major hotels along Avenida Paulista, Brooklin Novo, Barra Funda and Congonhas. The journey to Avenida Paulista takes 1 hour and 15 minutes. The buses leave every 30-90 minutes. A cheaper option is to take a bus to Bresser metro station (5 am-11 pm) and then take a train to the city centre.
www.airportbusservice.com.br

At the airport you will also find transfer companies. You can also take a blue and white taxi.

Aeroporto Congonhas is located 14 kilometres south of Centro (a 30-minute drive) serving regional airlines.

Buses

São Paulo has an extensive public transport system. Bus services are frequent and cover the entire city, but congestion can sometimes make travelling slow. With stops clearly marked, bus routes are easy to find. There are different tickets to suit your needs. Enter at the front of the bus, and pay the cobrador (fare collector).
