Described by the New York Times as “a desert version of Miami's South Beach,” Scottsdale is Arizona’s biggest hit. The city is rich in culture and natural grandeur. The Scottsdale Arts District lends to proud attractions of galleries, studios, and museums, while architectural majesties like Frank Lloyd Wright's Taliesin West supplement the city’s Western heritage. Its position on the northern stretches of the Sonoran Desert and the McDowell Mountain Range makes the Scottsdale experience a spectacular one.

THE CITY

BCFC/Shutterstock.com

Like a hidden oasis in the desert, Scottsdale has a wide variety of attractions that cater to every interest and passion. Rich in history and culture, this "desert version of Miami's South Beach", as the New York Times put it, is rich history and cultural past, which feed into the new, vibrant world and provide perfect balance for a truly unique city.

The 20th century would bring with it the beginnings of Scottsdale's illustrious arts and culture scene. Artist Jessie Benton Evans allowed the Jokake Inn to be built on her property, which became a tearoom and guesthouse in the 1920s. The Inn now resides on the property of The Phoenician Resort and Hotel, which maintains a tea house of its own. Renowned architect Frank Lloyd Wright established his winter home, Taliesin West, at the foot of the McDowell Mountains in 1937. Cosmetic extraordinaire Elizabeth Arden opened the Maine Chance Spa in 1940 as a getaway for local and international celebrities and royals.

In 1970, "America's original art walk" was created in downtown Scottsdale and renamed the Scottsdale ArtWalk. Perhaps most laudably, the citizens of Scottsdale approved a sales tax in the 1990s that would fund the McDowell Sonoran Preserve. This act served to protect one-third of Scottsdale's land.

SHOPPING

www.BillionPhotos.com/Shutterstock.com

Scottsdale is, perhaps, well known for its bountiful shopping centers, outlet malls, and specialty boutiques. Kierland Commons is wonderful place to start, but don't limit yourself to just downtown Scottsdale or only Scottsdale. You can find numerous shopping areas scattered in the surrounding area, each featuring better shops than the last. Be sure to grab a bite to eat and refuel while shopping!

Kierland Commons

Kierland Commons is an unbelievable collection of shops, restaurants, galleries, and outdoor squares. The very air teems with life and activity. Located in downtown Scottsdale, Kierland Commons is a mecca for tourists, locals, and lovers of shopping. Some of the many featured stores are Michael Kors, Chico's, Apple, Pandora, Sur La Table, Eileen Fisher, Everything But Water, Anthropologie, Banana Republic, Oils & Olives by Queen Creek Olive Mill, Bose, and Coach.
