A trip to New York City would be the perfect occasion to visit Syracuse, the fifth most populous city in the state of New York and the county seat of Onondaga County. First inhabited by Iroquois Indians, Syracuse's area has been interested by an intense flow of migration since the mid 1600s, which has transformed the city in a melting-pot of different communities and one of the most important basis for commercial salt production. Now it's a vibrant and cosmopolitan city with a wealth of cultural activities and word-famous events.

THE CITY

debra millet/Shutterstock.com

Over the past 200 years, Syracuse has been many things—the nation's top producer of salt, a thriving industrial city, and a major academic and cultural center. One thing it has never been is dull.

Salt production began in the late 1700s and increased drastically with the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825. It waned around the end of the American Civil War and gave way to industrial manufacturing. Syracuse is still known as the "Salt City" for providing most of the salt used in the United States in the 1800s.

Central New York's Native American heritage is evidenced by the names of its towns.

Additionally, Syracuse has attracted immigrants from all over the world, and the tableau of the city is painted with the rich culture of these people that can be seen with a stroll through one of the city's many villages, such as Little Italy or Tipperary Hill. Although history and tradition are important to Syracusans, this is not a city that lives in its past. It has grown into a vibrant academic and cultural center with the continued growth of Syracuse University, a major research university with nationally recognized athletic programs, and Upstate Medical University. Work from local artists is celebrated and can be found in the city's many art galleries as well as in some local shops.

Parents and their children can find exciting activities at the Everson Museum, Rosamond Gifford Zoo, The MOST, and the Erie Canal Museum, along with the Landmark Theatre, Syracuse Stage, and Armory Square with its many fine Restaurants, Taverns, and Nightclubs.

DINING

Joe Shlabotnik/Flickr (image cropped)

Two words sum up the philosophy of most food in Syracuse—fresh and local. Although there are several pubs located in Syracuse, you will find more than just typical bar fare here. Each restaurant adds its own flair to its cuisine, and, because of the city's rich cultural diversity, there is also a variety of authentic world cuisine available.

Dinosaur Bar-B-Que

What began as a mobile concession stand has become a standard for barbeque in the Northeast U.S. Dinosaur Bar-B-Que opened its flagship location in Downtown Syracuse in 1988 and has since expanded operations to other cities in New York as well as New Jersey and Connecticut. Dinosaur has been featured on Travel Channel and Food Network shows for its signature sauces served with pulled pork, ribs and brisket, as well as dishes like Creole-spiced deviled eggs and fried green tomatoes. They even have a gluten-free menu.

Airports

Syracuse Hancock International Airport (SYR) is located 4.6 miles (7.4 km) northeast of Syracuse. It is a joint civil-military public airport. In addition to major airlines Air Canada, American Eagle, Delta, JetBlue, United Airlines and USAirways, Syracuse Hancock International Airport is also served by Comair, CommutAir (Continental affiliate), Allegheny, Mesa, Trans States, Cogan Air, Piedmont, Chautauqua, and Shuttle America (USAirways affiliate). Affiliate airlines serving the airport are subject to change.

Syracuse Regional Taxi has an exclusive agreement to provide ground transportation for the airport. Accordingly, they are the only company allowed to operate a dispatch center inside the terminal and state vehicles outside the airport. They provide both taxi and shuttle van services. Other companies are allowed to pick up passengers on a prearranged basis.

Visa/Passport

Citizens of the Schengen countries, the United Kingdom, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Japan, South Korea,

Taiwan and the Kingdom of Brunei can visit the United States for up to 90 days without applying for a visa (as well as citizens of Andorra, Lichtenstein, Monaco and San Marino). Citizens of these countries must obtain an ESTA (Electronic System for Travel Authorization) before traveling. All other travelers must obtain a visa before visiting the United States. International travelers need a passport that is valid for at least 3 months after the end of their intended trip in order to enter the country.

Best Time to Visit

As with the rest of New York State, temperatures in Syracuse may vary drastically throughout the year: the warmest period to visit Syracuse stretches from June to August, though the high humidity (around 50% on average through the year) could bring about rain already during the last days of July. Winters can be cold, so a trip is better left for late Spring (approximately April-May): this season offers tourists open air attractions, such as artists performing in the streets, and the beauty of many flowering trees in the numerous parks and along the avenues of the city center.

Public Transport

Centro, operated by the Central New York Regional Transportation Authority (CNYRTA), provides bus services to approximately 42,000 passengers per day in Syracuse and its surrounding suburbs as well as the surrounding counties of Oswego, Cayuga and Oneida.
