

Trivandrum

simonharrycollins/Shutterstock.com

Kerala's first city, with its knotty official name of Thiruvananthapuram (often substituted by the shorter, more manageable Trivandrum), is an exhaustive introduction to southern India's urban and cultural life. Trivandrum tends to be unjustly overlooked en route to the state's beachside settlements, but easily warrants a few days of its own.

THE CITY

Alexandra Lande/Shutterstock.com

Being the official capital of Kerala, Trivandrum is the state's most important administrative, cultural, and intellectual hub, home to significant institutions such as, for example, the science and tech development hubs of Vikram Sarabhai Space Centre and Centre for Development of Advanced Computing; the University of Kerala also has its base here.

Having been renamed to Thiruvananthapuram in 1991, Trivandrum still most often goes by Trivandrum for convenience. There are a few sites of interest to visitors, from the Kerala Science and Technology Museum with its world-class planetarium, to a good selection of museums and eateries serving south Indian specialities. The Shangumugham Beach is a pleasant daytime and/or evening getaway a stone's throw away from the Trivandrum International airport; Kovalam Beach, slightly further afield, is another local favourite.

DO & SEE

ostill/Shutterstock.com

There is plenty to warrant a stay in Kerala's first city, and it is here, in Trivandrum, that a visitor can have the best go at experiencing Kerala urban life. If the inner city's museums and palaces prove insufficient, tranquil beaches (most notably, one of the world's finest: Kovalam) and further sights are only a short drive away.

Padmanabhaswamy Temple

Although entry into the shrine is allowed to Hindus alone, visitors of any religious denomination can marvel at the 30-metre high golden gate (gopura) towering right next to the Fort. The sizeable structure is among the world's richest in terms of valuable metals and precious stones used in its interior decor. Its early origins remain steeped in mystery.

Thiruvananthapuram Zoo

The Thiruvananthapuram Zoo - Asia's oldest - reportedly served as inspiration for the animals of internationally-acclaimed

"Life of Pi". Today, the zoo's inhabitants comprise hippos, leopards, deer, reptiles, and many more. The grounds are expansive, so do wear your walking shoes.

Keralam - Museum of History and Heritage

The Museum of History and Heritage showcases artefacts through centuries of Keralan history. There are also a few multimedia and interactive displays, making a tour entertaining, alongside educational. One of the highlights are model displays of traditional Keralan interiors.

Napier Museum

The Napier Museum collection is dedicated largely to Indian deities and Keralan rulers of yesteryear, their endeavours and conquests. There are plenty of fascinating artefacts on display, but the building itself is equally worth a look around, being a fine (albeit atypical) example of 19th-century architecture.

Kovalam Beach

One of India's - and, indeed, the entire world's - finest beaches traces the Keralan coast roughly 15km away from central Trivandrum. The beach is a travellers' darling, and a popular evening hangout spot for Trivandrum locals. The Lighthouse Beach at Kovalam's southern end has an elevated viewing platform and is especially scenic.

Puthe Maliga Palace Museum

Once the residence of Travancore royals, the roughly 200-year-old Puthe Maliga Palace (also known as the Kuthira Malika) has been converted into a fascinating museum containing historic artefacts pertaining to the Travancore dynasty. A guided tour of the palace is included in the ticket price; admission to palace grounds is free.

DINING

Santhosh Varghese/Shutterstock.com

The state of Kerala is famously referred to as "the land of spices", which is reflected in the local cuisine that makes generous use of turmeric, pepper, cardamon, nutmeg, ginger, and many other. A culinary experience not to miss is the sadya spread: a meal served on banana leaf, traditionally eaten by hand, which consists of rice and a variety of curries, along with dessert. Keralan cuisine is also famously not limited to vegetarian only, with various meats and fish represented across a plethora of dishes.

Villa Maya

One of the finest dining experiences in Kerala (and, according to some rankings, all of India), Villa Maya is an exquisite restaurant occupying a beautiful colonial mansion. The culinary emphasis is on elevated Keralan specialities, with a focus on seafood. Seating available inside the well-kept building or outside in private courtyard gazebos.

Zam Zam

This incredibly popular eatery serves up scrumptious Middle Eastern meat grills, north and south Indian specialities, seafood, and a sizeable selection of vegetarian dishes. For the best deals, check out the set combo meal menus, which are most often a steal. They are especially known for their ice creams.

Mothers Veg Plaza

The wildly popular Mothers Veg Plaza is beyond any doubt one of Trivandrum's finest vegetarian dining establishments. Food here is served as sadhya (laid out on a large banana leaf), with multiple varieties of dosas (savoury pancake) to go along. It's a casual affair, and a wildly popular one.

Azad Restaurant

Azad has been in business since as early as 1940, a fact reflected in the menu that lists dishes with chicken, mutton and fish cooked according to the original 1940s recipes - but not only. It's a place well-known to and still frequented by locals, for both sit-in dining and take-away.

CAFES

Santhosh Varghese/Shutterstock.com

Cafes aren't a foreign concept to Trivandrum residents, and there are quite a few across town. For breakfast (or any other meal of the day, for that matter), try a local speciality called dosa: a pancake cooked to crispy perfection, made with rice and black lentil flower, served with one or more types of dip.

Indian Coffee House

The distinctive-looking spiral-shaped building containing this Indian Coffee House branch is well-known to Keralans, who regularly take advantage of its efficient service and inexpensive offerings of savoury meals and delightful sweets.

Cherries & Berries

This excellent little cafe serves a good selection of sweet and savoury treats. The latter delights with jacket potatoes, grilled cheese sandwiches, pasta, pizza, burgers, soups and salads; the former's highlights are ice creams and milkshakes, along with a great many teas and coffees.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Peter Kim/Shutterstock.com

Trivandrum admittedly has rather scarce evening entertainment, but a few after-hour establishments do exist, even beyond hotel restaurants and bars alone. Keep in mind that most places that sell alcoholic drinks outside of upscale hotels are only allowed to serve wine and beer, leaving hotel-adjacent bars to monopolise strong liquor and cocktails. In the evenings, many head to nearby Shangumugham or, slightly further afield, Kovalam beach.

Maanaveeyam Veedhi

What was once an inconspicuous side street has, over the years, grown to become an important cultural hub and space frequently used by local artist and performers to put on a varying array of shows. It's one of the city's coolest hangout spots, and especially so on Sunday evenings.

Mind, however, that Maanaveeyam Veedhi is also known to be frequented by street racers, and although street racing isn't exactly allowed, it still takes place here between 5pm and 2am on some nights. Injuries have been reported, so please do take precaution.

SHOPPING

Santhosh Varghese/Shutterstock.com

Quite a few things make the must-buy shopping shortlist in Kerala, all of which are, naturally, readily available in the state's capital. Head to one of Trivandrum's vibrant markets to stock up on celebrated Keralan spices, and do try the state-grown tea and coffee, well-liked by both locals and visitors. There is no shortage of jewellery (including real gold and diamond) and hand-crafted souvenirs (most prominently, wood carvings), as well as cosmetics containing the essence of the Keralan-native coconut.

Chalai Bazaar

The sprawling bazaar is one of Kerala's oldest, one far removed from being a mere tourist attraction, used rather by local residents themselves.

It's a feast for the eyes and an assortment of goods to any heart's desire, from fresh fruit and vegetables to Indian sweets, textiles, and cosmetics.

Address: East Fort, Trivandrum

Connemara Market

Another one of Kerala's busy markets is Connemara, a shopping destination as much as a cultural experience.

Haggling is near-mandatory, so do not hesitate to try and secure best deals on edibles, fabrics, and clothing by giving a counter-offer.

Opening hours: Daily 6am-9pm

SMSM Institute

This government-run treasure trove of local crafts is a reliable location where to shop for Kerala souvenirs. The selection is large and price ranges vary, some items being on the higher end of the price spectrum, but deals are generally rather reasonable.

Sarwaa

Sarwaa is a fantastic, quaint store and cafe away from the hustle and bustle of Trivandrum's central shopping areas. The well-stocked shop sells hand-crafted figurines, jewellery, accessories, textiles, cosmetics, and more. There is a delightfully atmospheric cafe on-site, too.

Passport / Visa

The Indian government offers a traditional visa (stamped inside of the passport), or an eVisa, obtained online. All nationals of the European Union and multiple countries across the world are eligible for an eVisa, which should be applied for at least 4 days prior to travel date (but no further in advance than 30 days) and is accepted at 24 airports and 3 seaports countrywide. Special conditions apply to Pakistani passport holders or individuals with familial ties to Pakistan. Citizens of Bhutan, Nepal, and the Maldives are exempt from visa requirements (if not entering via mainland China).

Trivandrum International Airport

The Trivandrum International Airport offers a number of domestic and international connections. It is conveniently located not too far from Trivandrum city centre.

A public bus service serves the airport; journeys from the city to the airport take roughly 10 minutes. Taxis are available for hire in the arrivals area.

Best Time to Visit

Late May sees the start of monsoon season in Kerala, and although visitors used to avoid the months of June through September for this very reason, the trend seems to have started to change, and an increasing number of tourists make their way to Kerala during the year's most humid months. Another reason to come in August is the large-scale cultural festival of Onam, which brings 10 straight days of festivities.

October through February remain the months most popular with tourists for their favourable weather, while February through May can get very hot and are best avoided if you're sensitive to high temperatures.

Public Transport

Most bus routes start from the Trivandrum City Bus Terminal at East Fort and run across the city from there. Bus numbers are indicated in numerals and destinations only written in Malayalam (the local language), but most locals speak English and would most likely be able to assist.

The preferred mode of public transportation in Trivandrum is the autorickshaw, which is fast, cheap and efficient. These can be taken at regular bus stations or signposted autorickshaw stops.

Taxi

Taxis are ubiquitous and can be hired easily. It is common to hire a cab for an entire day or even several days in a row, which is an option to consider if you're travelling with a group or planning to do extensive sightseeing.
